McGill Team Victorious Over Vermont Opponents

"Resolved That The United States Should Cancel Her War Debts" — Lande And Doig of McGill Uphold Affirmative — Bigelow And McCuir of Vermont Argue For The Negative — Large attendance at Mock Parliament.

UPHOLDING the affirmative side of the subject "Resolved that the United States should cancel its war debts, the McGill Debating Union team composed of Harold Lande and Melbourne Doig defeated the University of Vermont team represented by J. E. Bigelow and R. E. McCuir, in an international debate, held last night in the Union Ballroom. The debate was conducted in a novel manner, combining the University of Vermont's formal style of debate with the Mock Parliament form to which the McGill debaters conform.

The verdict was arrived at by the decision of a committee of three judges in the persons of Judge Survever, Orville S. Tyndale, and Professor C. E. Fryer of the History Department. Edmund Collard, president of the Debating Union, occupied the Speaker's chair. After explaining that the debate would be modelled upon novel lines, Collard called upon Harold Lande, the first speaker for the affirmative.

Ignorance General
Lande opened his arguments by saying that the average man knows very little about war debts. A cancellation of Europe's debts to the States would entail many beneficial results. To meet their obligations, the Allies must adopt one of two policies. The first is to pay the United States with monetary gold, as the transfer of foreign currencies to American dollars is practically impossible. The other alternative is to pay the States with commodities, but this too is impractical because of the tariff policy which this country maintains. The States are also harming themselves, as Europe's currency is rapidly depreciating in value, which condition is adversely affecting America in her export trade. A cancellation of debts would consequently increase the purchasing power in Europe for American goods and so materially aid the States.

The affirmative do not advocate the unconditional cancellation of payments, but rather a cancellation on condition that Europe should reduce armaments. This would benefit mankind. Otherwise by a refusal to cancel the debts, complete chaos would result.

The first speaker for the negative confessed to be somewhat disappointed with the affirmative's treatment of the subject, as he expected a more analytical discussion. He pointed out that in his opinion the most vital issue of the entire question had been omitted, namely that no attempt was made for readjustment of the proposition. Just as the United States were blamed more for coming into the War near its close rather than thanked, so she would be blamed for her tardiness in cancellation if she decided to do so.

Bigelow contended that the debtor nation can pay and are willing to make every effort to relieve themselves of their burden. When they accepted the loan they agreed to repay; thus it automatically became a legal obligation. In view of this fact cancellation would be illegal.

Bigelow in conclusion proposed that the United States establish that the debts should be adjusted according to the capacity to pay of the various debtor nations.

Melbourne Doig, second speaker for the affirmative, revolved his arguments about the moral obligation on the part of the States to stop all international payments. The loan was made to insure safety for democracy throughout the world. What the affirmative challenge is the moral right of the United States to collect these debts. The American citizens would be found to bear taxation amounting to approximately $4 per capita every year yet Europe paid much more in the nature of property and territory, during the War.

The debts have increased by 54% since the conclusion of the War, through interest and depreciation of foreign currencies. The Allies are bound legally but not morally to pay them. Europe cannot meet her obligations.

Will Be Guests of McGill

St. David's Society of Montreal will be the guests of McGill University this evening in the biological building, to hear a lecture by Prof. F. E. Lloyd, M. A., professor of botany and director of the biological department on the subject, "Carnivorous Plants." The lecture will be illustrated with slides and films made by Prof. Lloyd himself in the course of his researches. The meeting begins at 8.15 p.m. and friends of St. David's Society and others interested are cordially invited to attend.

Vermonters dislike Co-Eds' Activities On Their Campus

"They Try to Get Into Too Many Things" Claims Bigelow

THE Daily caught Messrs. Bigelow and McCuir, the University of Vermont debaters, in informal attitudes last night at the dinner-table of a local house before they proceeded to the Union to cross swords with Lande and Doig of McGill.

When questioned regarding the status of women on the Vermont campus Mr. Bigelow said that he was not prepared to commit himself definitely on this or any other subject, but he did go so far as to say that he seldom went to bed before 12.30. He added that he thought that women tried to get in on too many campus activities.

Like McGill, there is a statue condition at Vermont, or one closely corresponding to it. It appears that among other things, there is a rock which is an object of peculiar veneration, situated in the college precincts. In the course of the past few days, marauders or ruffians of the baser sort have painted this rock; but not content with painting it, they are continuing the game by removing the paint steadily under cover of night, and so far no one has been able to find out the perpetrators of the crime.

Mr. Bigelow stated that there are about 1300 students at Vermont. The Medical School comprises 300 of these, and is the outstanding faculty at this university.

Questioned regarding the effect of prohibition on the student body as a whole, the visitors said that a drinking situation is not recognized by the authorities as being possible, and therefore there are no regulations in this respect. Beer is not hard to obtain, but the majority of Bacchus' devotees prefer alcohol, as it is very much cheaper. Mr. Bigelow summed up the whole situation by saying "Of course, Canada is very close."

The guest-speakers, when asked about the politics of the student body, said that at a recent poll held at the University of Vermont, a small Republican majority prevailed, while the Socialists ran their very close second.

A regulation in force at Vermont which might seem peculiar to McGill students is one which states that smoking is strictly forbidden in or upon college property; Mr. Bigelow went on to explain that this is due to the fact that the buildings are not fireproof.

Hotel Course Not Planned By McGill

Sir Arthur Currie Denies Report of Q.H.A.

A course to train hotel men in their profession has never been considered by McGill University, according to a statement made yesterday by Sir Arthur Currie, principal. He was replying to a statement made by William C. Murray, executive secretary of the Province of Quebec Hotel Association, in an address delivered before the members of the Canadian Progress Club in the Windsor Hotel on Tuesday.

Mr. Murray was reported as saying that such a course was at present under consideration by McGill University, the Montreal Board of Trade and the Province of Quebec Hotel Association, following initial steps taken by the Board of Trade.

Sir Arthur said: "May I say that this statement is without a foundation and devoid of truth. Such a course has never been considered, is not now being considered, and I do not believe it ever will be considered."

Law And Medicine Topic Of Address By Former Dean

CHIEF JUSTICE R. A. E. GREENSHIELDS, former Dean of Law at McGill University and present Chancellor of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, will address the Medical Undergraduates' Society on Monday evening, November 28th, at 8.30 p.m. in the Assembly Hall of the Medical Building. The address will deal chiefly with the relations of Law and Medicine.

As a graduate of McGill, Chief Justice Greenshields has always been keenly interested in University affairs, occupying prominent positions in student societies both before and after his graduation. He is one of the most eminent jurists in Canada today and a national authority on criminal law. His numerous addresses, always characterized by lucidity, incisiveness, humour and abundance of information have brought him recognition as one of the best orators in the country.

Dean Eve Addresses Electrical Club On Scientific Questions

Speaks of Radio Eclipse And The Upper Atmosphere

MENTIONS PICARD

Outlines Epic Flight Into Stratospheric Regions of European Scientist

At the weekly luncheon of the Electrical Club of Montreal held yesterday afternoon at 12.45 in the Spanish Room of the Queen's Hotel, Dean A. S. Eve, D.Sc., F.R.S., of the Department of Physics, was the guest speaker. The Dean gave a technical address on the "Radio Eclipse and the Upper Atmosphere," which was enthusiastically received by the members present.

Following lunch, the speaker was introduced by D. W. Massie, president of the Club. In his remarks Mr. Massie stated that he was pleased to congratulate Dean Eve on the celebration of his seventieth birthday on November 22nd.

Mentions Picard
Dean Eve spoke of Picard's epic flight into the stratosphere, the layer of air directly above the atmosphere as we know it, and of the various heights to which airplanes and captive balloons have risen. However, the Dean continued, there is a layer of air above these two, which is called the ionosphere, which has not yet been penetrated. He illustrated this point by three pieces of cardboard. The first, the atmosphere, the second about fifty miles above the first, the stratosphere, which he named the E layer and the ionosphere about one hundred miles above the second, which is termed the F layer. It was the latter the Dean dealt mainly.

The question that has puzzled scientists for many years is the reason for these layers. A scientist by the name of Chapman proved that spots in the sun, which cause electrical storms, reach the earth a day and a quarter late. Therefore he concluded that the earth must send out something to delay these waves from reaching the earth.

Go To Newfoundland
An Englishman named Appleton wrote to McGill and told them that they had an excellent opportunity in Canada, due to the geographical position of the country, for studying this upper layer of air. The University sent scientists to Newfoundland to do this. The reactions of the above mentioned layers of air on radio transmission were also discussed in detail. Continued on Page 2

"Comedy Of Errors" Given For Freshmen

The first production of "A Comedy of Errors" presented by the English Department was given last night in Moyse Hall to all the first year men and women.

Due to the fact that this presentation was for the freshman class no review of the play appears in today's Daily. Tonight's production, however, will be reviewed in tomorrow's issue.

Freshettes Debate In Cup Competition

Ten Competing Teams Will Meet In First Relay

OPENS FRIDAY NEXT

Five Winning Teams Will Meet In Future Relays

Tomorrow the first relay of the Freshette Debating Competition, held under the auspices of the Delta Sigma Society, will be run off in R. V. C., beginning at three o'clock. This competition, the final winners of which receive a cup, opens very promisingly with ten competing teams; the five winning teams of this relay will meet in future relays until one team achieves the coveted laurels.

On Friday the competing teams, paired off into five groups, will debate in separate rooms, three teams debating simultaneously at 3 o'clock, and two at 3.30, on their choice of the given subjects. These subjects are: Resolved that: The Cave Man was happier than the Modern Man; The Fear of Punishment is greater than the Hope of Reward; and Woman's education should equal Man's. The judges for the competition remain to be announced, and also the system of marking, whether by points or otherwise, to be used.

A turnout of twenty embryo debaters breaks all records for this competition, states the Delta Sigma executive, who hope that as much enthusiasm for debating will be evinced by the prospective co-ed audience. Debating for the benefit of ones judges alone is not exactly stimulating and the executive hope for a good turnout. Those wishing to hear the debates may find out in the Common Room where the various debates are being held and may hear whichever ones interest them.

Economy Recovery Discussed Tonight

Walsh And Brenhouse To Address Political Economy Club

"The Way to Economic Recovery with Particular Reference to the Regulated State" will be the topic discussed by Allison Walsh and Sam Brenhouse at the second meeting of the Political Economy Club to be held tonight at 8.30 o'clock in the smoking-room of the Arts Building.

Walsh will speak first dealing briefly with the causes of the prevailing depression, and with the various remedial proposals; and upholding the methods of state regulation of production, consumption and distribution. Brenhouse will attack these methods. In view of the present economic depression, this subject is of great practical importance.

A general discussion will follow the meeting, after which refreshments will be served. Second year students in Economics, as well as all honor students are especially requested to attend. Members of the Political Economy staff will be present at this meeting.

War Poets Depicted Stark And Realistic Aspect Of Conflict

Beatts Discusses Poetry Of War Before English Literature Society

LOST EARLY IDEALS

School Forsook Heroic Attitude To Portray Actual Suffering

"Emotion recollected in tranquillity" as a definition of poetry does not hold true in the instance of the poetry of the Great War, stated Patrick Beatts in an address to the English Literature Society yesterday afternoon at four o'clock in the Union Grill Room. War poetry, he said, is marked by spontaneity and stark accuracy of detail, and no one should consider that it has no permanent value in the nation's literature.

The poetry of the Great War, Beatts explained, divides naturally into two sections. First there was the idealistic period, typified by Rupert Brooke, which trusted in the ultimate redemption of humanity by the war. This was not true war poetry. The other period was exemplified by those poets who considered that they were taking part in a futile slaughter and wanted only to portray its naked horrors to an uncomprehending world.

Name Examples
As examples of the first phase Brooke, John MacRae and Edward Thomas were named. None of these were actually products of the war, having written poetry previously, and the two former particularly sang of the heroic aspect of warfare. Had Brooke and MacRae lived they would probably have been converted to the viewpoint of later poets.

In the second category Wilfred Owen, Robert Graves, and Siegfried Sassoon were mentioned. The poems of these men spring from the realization of the folly of war and the blindness of patriots at home. Graves, who is remembered for his novel, "Good-bye to All That," and Owen, a true purist, show the result of suffering and brutality upon the sharply balanced poetic mind. All three poets followed the doctrine that filth should be put upon paper only when it can benefit someone.

After reading selections from all the poets mentioned to prove his points, Beatts concluded with the sentiment that no love of country is sufficient to warrant the butchery of her citizens.

A general discussion brought the meeting to a close.

Exclusive Freshman Informal To Be Held

Howard Simpson's Orchestra Will Play

Members of the Entertainment Committee are working energetically to complete arrangements for the Fresh Informal, which is taking place on Friday, December 9, in the Union Ballroom. Dr. and Mrs. Cyrus MacMillan and Professor D'Hautserve have graciously extended their patronage. The name of the other patronesses has not yet been announced.

The dance is to be for freshmen exclusively, and positively no upperclassmen will be admitted. All who attend must wear red and white ribbons, the idea being to lend an informal atmosphere. Howard Simpson's Orchestra will provide the music for the dancing, which will continue from 9 to 1. Tickets are one dollar per couple, and may be obtained from any one of the following: John MacDonald, Mary Westman, Douglas Macfarlane, Norman Brown and Dennis Howard.

New Club Formed

Spanish Society Plans Program For Year

Monday will be the last day for applications for membership to the newly formed Spanish Club (the executive announced yesterday). A program for the rest of the year has already been drawn up and all students who wish to join the club are asked to do so immediately.

There is a fee of two dollars for membership in the club; this includes refreshments at all the meetings. Any particulars will be given to interested students by Professor Sugars, Honorary President of the organization. Fees may be paid to Jack Close, Loyal Ogilvie or Brodie.

The S.C.M. and Funds

THERE is no rosy glow on the S.C.M. financial horizon. An objective of one thousand dollars was set for their annual campaign, but so far results have not been of a cheering nature to those interested in the welfare of the local group. Less than three hundred dollars have been secured, and the close draws nigh.

It would be a serious blow to McGill if the Student Christian Movement were obliged to curtail their activities to any extent. The organization plays an important part in undergraduate life here. The facilities offered by Strathcona Hall, the services given to students strange to the city, the educational advantages of study groups, the social privileges, the international discussions, and the inter-collegiate conferences—all these need the financial support of McGill and its friends.

After all, there are a good many Christians in attendance here, and the S.C.M. should be their special interest. Perhaps all have not participated in its activities, or accepted the facilities it offers. If they can rouse sufficient enthusiasm to make a monetary contribution, and then proceed to remedy their lack of acquaintance with the group, they will find their generosity well justified. The S.C.M. must be maintained, and the present lethargic response to its appeal will do obvious harm to student life.

Reduced Fares?

NOW and then there arises from the campus a demand for reduced fares on the Montreal Tramways vehicles. The demand is never very seriously advanced, it is true, but since the Tramways Company is in the public eye just now, what with discussion on the physiological significance of being jolted about, and the like, the question can be well considered.

Of course, from the student point of view, no disadvantage is attached to the giving of reduced fares. However inexpensive a thing may be, reduction of its cost will always find advocates. But there seems to be little reason why students should be favored above others—others who are receiving scanty salaries and doing a lot with it, or others who are receiving no salaries at all.

Students are ever prone to consider themselves a privileged class. The fact that they have less money than many of their contemporaries can not bear too much weight, when we consider that they do far less to deserve any, and have far less need of any. And if, as other authorities are hinting, the Tramways are not "doing right by" the Montreal public, why should they accord privileges to students from elsewhere?

Freedom of Thought

THE accusation of intolerance is always a convenient one to hurl at those with whom we disagree. It is made all the more convenient by the fact that it is often true. Anyone with firm convictions is obliged to be intolerant. Anyone with strong ideas must be intolerant of contrary ones. There can be no such thing as a moralist tolerant of sin, a true judge tolerant of injustice.

But when along with the charge of intolerance comes a charge of a desire to prevent free speech, then the accuser is considering something more serious. For free speech, though by no means generally permitted, is commonly accepted as an ideal.

So the writer of a letter to us is quite correct when he says in effect that neither the writer of a letter in yesterday's issue (one concerning professors, Russia, and disarmament) nor the writer of an editorial on the same day, would wish to restrict freedom of speech. Neither of them would. Neither of them ever hinted that they would.

An attack on people who speak freely can not always be construed as an attack on free speech. The attack usually is brought about by the fact that so many who believe in free thought also believe in the right to think wrongly.

The BOOK SHELF

Werfel Considers An Italian Family

"THE PASCARELLA FAMILY" by Franz Werfel. Translated by D. F. Tait. Jarrold's London. 383 pp. 7s. 6d.

THE plot of this novel is negligible, the characters are nineteenth century in concept, the form is pure narrative without stylistic innovations, so usual at the present time, and yet it is a brilliant piece of work. What makes it a good book is the author's ability to infuse interest into the reader by his astute handling of the influence of the external happenings on the psychological make-up of the various members of the Pascarella family.

Don Domenico Pascarella is a Neapolitan gentleman of the oldest school, who can trace his lineage farther back than any of the upstart nobility, to whom his family means more than the world, and who therefore conceives of an active antagonism existing between the world and his family. It is his duty, in that case, to protect his children and bring them up in such a manner that they will not stain the pure white shield of the Pascarellas. His word is law to his children, to be obeyed unquestioningly and without murmur; his favours to be received with thanks and genuflections. A despot in his home, but one imbued with the greatest love towards his children, acting out of a profound sense of duty and an inherent regard for tradition.

His children do not consider their father's conduct as in any way abnormal or tyrannical. They accept it in the main as natural because it was always there. The annual visit to the premiere of the opera season is the only social event Don Domenico's household is allowed to attend, because the Pascarellas have for generations had a box at the opera. Two events break the even and strict tenor of the family way of life. Grazia, aided by her brothers and sisters attends a ball in defiance of parental authority which marks the first break between the children and the father, and Don Domenico's business, a small bank, is on the verge of bankruptcy. The outside world begins more and more to intrude on the isolated household and the results are disruptive. The sons emigrate to Brazil, the eldest daughter Annunziata contemplates entering a nunnery, Grazia falls in love with a middle aged Britisher, Arthur Campbell, and eventually becomes engaged to him against her father's wishes. The arrest of Don Domenico on a charge of concealing business failure and Campbell's successful efforts to free him and restore the business have an effect on the outlook of the old man. The family is restored again. Seemingly the same relationship as of old remains but yet the note is different. Don Domenico feels the old order passing away.

Werfel realises his characters in all instances and their actions and thoughts are the definite outcome of their personalities. Motives are gone into without an inordinate amount of introspection.

The author is one of a group of German writers who were born or lived in Tschechoslovakia, the so called Prague group to which also belong Max Brod and Franz Kafka. His novel on Verdi was published a few years ago and his play The Goat-song was much discussed, when first produced.

Finance Invades Godly Peasants

THE ARM OF GOLD, by Ralph Connor. McClelland and Stewart, Limited, Toronto. 314 pp. $2.00.

THE scene of this latest novel of Ralph Connor's is laid in Ravanoke, a little Cape Breton village overlooking the Bras d'Or. There, amid peaceful surroundings, the characters of the book, hardy, God-fearing, industrious peasants of Scottish descent eke out a bare living by fishing and farming.

Into this peaceful scene comes an American financier on a holiday fishing trip. Complications at once ensue. He, with typical American efficiency, sees the possibilities of this fertile valley supplying the neighbouring coal-mining districts with food products which they are now importing. He undertakes to organise a cooperative society. Later, through no fault of his the members commence gambling on the stock market, and lose. However all ends happily, and the American realises the "moral wickedness" of being a big financier and is reformed.

As is usual with Connor, the whole book is a series of moral dissertations. He finds occasion to discuss at various times the stupidity of jazz music, the evils of drinking, the dishonesty of the stock market, and the old question as to whether the Bible is literally true or not. His narrow attitude is well illustrated by the following: "To sell stock at a price that represents intrinsic value is a necessary and legitimate transaction. To sell stock at a price which the seller knows exceeds intrinsic economic value is a fraud and the seller is a robber."

The continual lectures in Connor's books make us always feel that they are suitable for Sunday school prizes more than anything else. In "The Arm of Gold" however he manages to hold our interest despite the numerous outbursts of moralising. He contrives to weave no less than four romances into his main theme.

What the book is really notable for, is some really fine character sketches. Mrs. Mac Askill the old Scotchwoman, who, with her stubborn manner and shrewd head always gets her own way and does everything right is a vivid being. No less so are the lazy Hughie Haggie who leads his wife a pretty dance, getting drunk every time she leaves him out of her sight, Willie George Cameron the weak-willed son of a wealthy father, Mr. Marriott the agnostic, Mr. Cameron the intolerant, hard-hearted Calvinist, Mr. Inman, the American business man, Daphne, his beautiful modern daughter, — in fact all the characters in the book are real and plausible. It is this alone which makes it interesting.

Marginalia

IN the "Observer" Humbert Wolfe, taking as his text the new edition of Untermyer's American Anthology, chides the English for the comparative neglect of recent American poetry. Apart from the work of such men as Vachel Lindsay, Robert Frost and Robinson little is known in England of the poetry of the younger writers. He might have added a little note to the effect that as a whole modern American poetry is by far superior to the product of the modern British poetic genius.

PAUL de Krulff, known widely for his "Microbe Hunters" continues his vivid presentations of the warriors against disease in "Men Against Death," issued recently. He considers in this book the work of Semmelweis in puerperal fever, of Banting and his co-workers, the discoverers of Minot in the therapy of anemia, the malaria treatment of paresis, the work of Niels Finzen, and others.

ON the occasion of the tercentenary of the birth of Spinoza three biographies of him appeared in English. "Blessed Spinoza" by Lewis Browne (Macmillan & Co.) is a purely biographical record; the other two books "Spinoza" by Benjamin De Casseres and "Spinoza the biographer" by Frederick Kettner consider Spinoza's philosophy. De Casseres views Spinoza as the "Liberator of God" the philosopher of mysticism, a subject very dear to the heart of this biographer.

ANDRE Maurois reports in the Times the discovery of a new talent in French fiction. His first book is "Voyage au bout de la nuit" and his name, or rather his pseudonym is Louis-Ferdinand Celine. The subject of the novel is: "A discourse in the first person by a man of the common people, in a language filled with slang, and in a tone which recalls the monologues of Joyce, but with much more continuity and less attention to minutiae of detail."

"THE Modern Quarterly" the organ of the Marxists in American literature will be issued monthly after January 1st 1933. V. F. Calverton will continue as the editor. It is becoming the fashion now to reconsider all works of art in terms of their value for the proletariat and to urge of the sole validity of the revolutionary spirit in modern art. At present the fight is on between the Left Bank and Turn Left movements and it is threatening to become a wordy mess.

THE eminent British economist G. D. H. Cole considers the present crisis and the way out in "A Guide Through World Chaos." An improvement is possible through a judicious correction of the capitalist system but he considers that Socialism is the more acceptable solution even though it may be harder to bring about.

ODDS and ENDS

A Digest of Items and Opinions in Other College Papers.

"NO admission prices will be charged hereafter to any athletic contests at Bethany College," President Goodnight of that West Virginia institution announced. "We want our friends to see our teams on the field because they are made up of bona fide college students, and we shall not continue to parade them like prize horses at the county fair."

A senior at Georgia Tech took the same course twice in the same room. He passed the course both times under the same professor and never discovered the error.

A DARTMOUTH professor has remarked some time ago that college students are superior in mentality to Mongolian idiots.

"How Students Can Help Achieve World Disarmament" is the subject to be used in the Editorial Contest now being sponsored by the Intercollegiate Disarmament Council. Three prizes of $40, $25, and $10 will be awarded to the best published student editorials.

LEFT-handed ping pong is being instituted at the University of Minnesota in order to cure students who stammer.

Correspondence

The Editor, McGill Daily,

Dear Sir:—

There are two items in yesterday's Daily on which we wish to comment:— first, the letter of Mr. Nesbitt, secondly, the editorial entitled, "Blind Mouths."

Both articles display an attitude of intolerance which has no place at a university like McGill. Surely neither Mr. Nesbitt nor the writer of the editorial would wish to restrict the freedom of speech of two men — both of whom have visited Russia and have made a study of conditions there? Their information is at least as reliable as that of any Montreal newspaper, or even of Mr. Nesbitt.

This form of cheap abuse to which both writers have resorted seems to us both ill-mannered and in bad taste. Such gratuitous abuse is very like the act of a sulky infant, sticking out its tongue at somebody it doesn't like.

Yours very truly,

gations. Disruption of European civilization will result from a refusal. The fourth and last speaker R. McCuir, affirmed that cancellation would free countries from debt but it would leave as much gold in each country as before. The budgets of nations show an ever increasing percentage for armaments. Two steps should be taken if any satisfactory arrangement is to be arrived at. First a revision of debts and secondly an extension of the time allotted for payment. Two thirds of her obligations have been cancelled already and it is only reasonable to suppose that the remainder should be exacted.

Representatives from McGill also went to Kingston and Vankleek Hill to study the recent total eclipse. Some of their findings were shown on the slides. The Dean spoke of the great courtesy shown these parties by the Bell Telephone Co., the Canadian Marconi Co., the Northern Electric Co., the National Research Council, etc.

In conclusion, Dean Eve stated that "increased knowledge of this subject means increased efficiency and increased interest in radio transmission." Research work is now going forward in McGill technical laboratories in an endeavour to discover more about the ionosphere and sensational discoveries are expected shortly.

Last Minute Rally Wins Close Game

Capture Second Position As Canadiens Conquer Royals

G. CRUTCHFIELD GETS DECIDING COUNTER

McHugh Gives Brilliant Goal Tending Display In Red Citadel

A FIGHTING McGill team earned another close decision last night, scoring the winning goal with only five minutes left to play. The Redmen took a one point lead three minutes after the match started when Hughie Farquharson tallied on Jack McGill's rebound. They clung tenaciously to this slim lead until twelve minutes of the third period had elapsed when a wild scramble took place and Vics tied the score. Two minutes later Nels Crutchfield took a pass at the maroon-shirt's blue line and shot above the net, hitting the wire. Gordie Crutchfield came in fast along the right boards to ram the rebound from the wire into the net for the winning counter before Robinson could make a move to block his shot.

Canadiens Trim Royals

Canadiens scored a 2-1 win over Royals in the first contest in a game that had the spectators on edge all the way. Both teams travelled at top speed and the result was uncertain right up to the end. Canadiens led a fast team and turned loose a flashing passing attack that kept the somewhat disorganized Royals slightly bewildered.

The second game started off very slowly, but Vics found themselves early in the second frame, and from then on they kept up a steady attack on the crimson citadel. The play ranged up and down the ice at a fast clip during the final two periods, with both teams working hard. The final outcome was very much in doubt until the bell put an end to the persistent efforts of the Carliniens to even the score.

In a last desperate try, Frank Carlin removed Robinson from the nets and put on a forward in his place, but the redmen managed to hold on to their slim margin.

McHugh In Form

Nels Crutchfield played his first game of the season and turned in a sparkling effort. Working at centre ice with Robinson and Farmer on the second line, he was a constant threat with his effective rushing and checking. Holly McHugh was the standout of the McGill team. He stopped shot after shot once the Vics commenced their big drive and several times squelched the Carlin snipers when they were right on top of him. The one shot that eluded him was one that he hadn't the slightest chance of stopping, as it came from a scramble at the goal-mouth. His stop on Copland's drive after the latter had tricked the defence and bored in, was a treat.

Meiklejohn, Shaughnessy and Riddell looked after the rear-guard duties in capable fashion, applying their weight without fear or favour. Meiklejohn turned in a great game offensively, as well, rocking Robinson often with his bullet-like drives.

Mullan Plays Well

Mullan was the pick of the Maroon attack. Many dangerous shots came from his stick and he gave several pretty passes to his team-mates, only to have McHugh block their shots. The veteran Sig Slater played a fine game on the Maroon defence and warded off many likely looking sallies.

Senior Basketeers Ready For Opener

Meet Sun Life Teams In First Exhibition Games

FOOTBALLERS OUT

WITH the first exhibition game only two days off, the basketeers were doing a lot of heavy drilling last night. Coach Van Wagner had his men on the floor for well over an hour, shooting, passing, dribbling, and trying various formations, both old and new, and finished it off by setting the squads at a little practice game at the end of the session. This latter was under the supervision of Luke Bannon who, being a referee, checked the men upon the new rulings that went into effect this year.

On Saturday night the two teams make their first public appearance, when they face Sun Life's senior and intermediate squads on the latter's spacious floor, situated on the eighth floor of the Sun Life Building. The Assurance men are purported to be exceptionally strong this year, and two good games should reward all McGillians who care to cheer their teams on. Bill Opzoomer, veteran of the Sun Lifers, has been recently elected captain of the team, and is said to be leading the strongest aggregation the Assurance people have had for years.

Footballers Back

A bright spot in McGill's practice was the reappearance of Hammond, Lee and Halpenny. These men are all old-timers on the squad, and fill in several of the loop-holes that were troubling Coach Van Wagner. Now only Young, Monahan, and Weber are among the missing, of whom the last two are expected out daily; and Young's reappearance at practices should not be a matter of many days.

For Saturday's games, Coach Van Wagner intends using all the men at his disposal, so as to try out the newcomers under fire. In addition to this exhibition game on Saturday night, the teams are scheduled to meet the newly-formed N.D.G. club, a week from Saturday, with the Y.M.H.A. intermediates opposing the Red Seconds in the first game.

McGill - Columbus In Polo Doubleheader At K. Of C. Tonight

Both Teams In Good Shape For Important Encounters

RED HOME GAMES

WITH the benefit of a week's rigorous practice, both McGill polo squads return to league competition tonight in a double bill against Columbus. The seniors meet the same Columbus team which blanked them 2-0 on the occasion of their last meeting, while the seconds face the Columbus Blues.

During the past week, Coach Vickers has made the boys realize that they are playing on a polo team, and the practices have been long and arduous. Last Friday, during the regular training period, a practice game was arranged for the seniors, against the Columbus firsts. Instead of the usual two seven minute periods, as in city league games, four five minute periods featured this tilt. The intercollegiate matches are played under this ruling, which also permits two substitutes during the game. Although no official count was kept of the scoring, the Redmen certainly held their own against the Dominion champs.

Intercollegiate Soon
Meanwhile, the city league games should put the Redmen in fine fettle for the coming intercollegiate tilts. On December 3, the McGill poloists travel to the Harv House pool in Toronto for the first match of a two-game series. The return game will be played the following Saturday in McGill's home pool, the K. of C. tank.

One thing the coach does not have to worry about for the intercollegiate affair, is a scarcity of material. There are no less than twelve poloists with senior qualifications, and all trying hard. Wayland will undoubtedly hold down his undisputed position of goal-er. Stein and French are forwards of last year's intercollegiate squad, while McLean who played sub last season has moved up to forward position this year. Worrall, another of last season's intercollegiate subs, has played forward occasionally this season, and Freeman, a newcomer, has been showing good form at that position in the last few practices. The contenders for defence positions are a little more numerous, with Shaw, Shapiro, Davis, Shragovitch, Gross and Doig working in that capacity.

Hard Match Expected

Despite the fact that the Columbus team has shown nothing like its last season's form in the games so far, they can be expected to show some stiff opposition to the McGill seniors tonight. Their team has been somewhat revised to form a stronger unit. Greenough, star Junior Columbus man has moved up to centre position on the senior line-up, while Hight, a defenceman, has shifted positions with Sheriffs, speedy forward. Coupled with Quinn, one of the trickiest forwards in the game, the Columbus line presents a front that is not to be despised.

The junior tilt is one between two well matched teams. In their last encounter earlier in the season, the junior Redmen downed the Blues by a 5-4 score. The Columbus team has shown some improvement since that time however, and a close match is predicted. A win for the McGill lads would be a good thing, especially since they do not occupy a very lofty position in the league standing.

Home Games

The games tonight are home games for McGill and no charge will be made to any students who wish to see what promise to be, two of the closest affairs of the season. The first game gets away at 8.30.

The following men will report at the Columbus pool at 8.15:
SENIORS-Wayland, Shaw, Shapiro, Stein, Davis, French, McLean, Freeman, Shragovitch, Cross.
JUNIORS-Tessier, Worrall, Smyth, Percy, Lyman, Silverstone, MacIure, Dukes.

5.00 p.m. at the Montreal High School Gymnasium. All newcomers are invited to turn out.

Hockey practices will henceforth be held at 1.30 p.m. daily at the Forum. The senior team will practice regularly on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Fridays. The junior team has been allotted the Wednesday hour and the Thursday hour will be open to juniors, intermediates, and seniors alike.

Matmen Show Good Form In Workouts

Coach Smith Rounding Men Into Shape

VETERANS RETURN

CANDIDATES for the McGill wrestling team underwent a strict session at the hands of Coach Smith in the Field House yesterday. The men are just beginning to realize the full value which these spacious training grounds afford, after occupying a cramped corner of the High School gym, and fairly reveled in the going. The work-out consisted of a series of bouts between evenly matched opponents, the performers attempting to put to practical use the knowledge imparted to them by the coach during the early part of the season. Coach Smith stood over each pair of belligerents, correcting the errors of his proteges and setting them right on many a doubtful point.

Black Aggressive

Black and Bell had an interesting set-to in the lighter weights, both men demonstrating a surprisingly large number of holds for newcomers to the game. Black should be a distinct acquisition for he has that quality which decides many a close bout, aggressiveness. Another candidate for the lighter weights, White, also looked good and is a strong choice for a regular berth on the squad.

There is a plethora of talent among the middle weights and heavies as most of the men have been wrestling for one or two years. MacLean, an erratic attendant at the practices, is an exceedingly powerful performer, and with a little conditioning, will be considered highly by the coach. Dainow put in an early appearance and looks ready for his biggest year in the game. H. D. Smith turned out yesterday and handled himself, in fine style. He should go a long way providing he appears regularly and gives the coach an opportunity to work on him.

Coach Issues Articles

Coach Smith is preparing a series of articles on the finer points of the game, and followers of wrestling should have much to enthuse over. The coach will undoubtedly do much to dispel the false impression of wrestling bruited around the campus.

and materials may be purchased by regular students of McGill University at a discount of 33 1-3 per cent. In order to obtain this discount a student will have to call at the Athletic Office for an order and bring his book of athletic coupons for identification.

Manitoba Reporters
Edit Metropolitan
Paper in Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Man. — The staff of the Manitoban had a big day when the presses of the Winnipeg Free Press Evening Bulletin were turned over to them to get out the paper. The college reporters combed the city for news, and prepared the whole paper for publication. It was a sixteen-page edition, and represented a lot of work. The object of this unusual proceeding was to give the University newspaper staff an insight into the workings of a great city newspaper. The Manitoban reporters raked the city in company with the regular Free Press reporters, covering all the varied branches of the big daily. University students were assigned to the financial, sport, police, city hall, hotels, railway stations, society, and all the other fields that go to provide the reading material for its thousands of subscribers.

Hunt up News

An opportunity was given students to interview prominent men, butterfly collectors and police sergeants. The mysteries of reading copy and writing heads was a part of their initiation.

The impressions of the Manitobans can be best expressed in their own words:

We are not reporters of the Free Press. We don't know anything about it, but we are! Just for today!

This editorial room is a queer place. A lot of men sit around in shirt-sleeves and frantically pound typewriters. Paper is all over the desks, and on the floor. A little doo-ligger runs on a wire, up and out through the ceiling. Then it comes back again.

We are told that it takes copy to the composing room. We would like to go to the composing room.

Look "Green"

We have arrived early. The early bird gets the assignment, of something. We stand around and wait. The men look at us. They think we are pretty green. We are pretty green.

A man comes in with a camera. He is going to take our picture. He tells us to form a group. We do. The real reporters look at us. We are very nervous. A flash-light flashed. Our picture has been taken.

We are given assignments. Some of us are to stay in the office at the desk. Others are to go out with real live reporters, and report. Others are just to report. The lucky ones go to the police court and parliament buildings, and to interview Sir Harry Lauder. The others go to the teachers' convention, the Humane Society, or the parliament dome. The co-eds work on the society column and women's clubs.

Much Humility

We write copy. It is pretty awful. Our sentences are too long; we use words that are too big. We don't know that we are supposed to write; we don't know anything. What is this education, anyway! We resolve to use short sentences and two-syllable words in the future. We have in this.

The office is full of smoke. There is no fire, but reporters like cigarettes. We like cigarettes, too, and smoke a lot to create an impression.

Our articles have to be rewritten. They have no introduction, no interest, nothing. We try to use the

"I can remember when"

Ladies (God bless them!) used to wear hoop-skirts to the Class Dance;

"when nearly every male student wore sideburns and carried a cane;

"when the annual Sleigh Ride was the big Whoopee of the year!"

Yes, and we can remember when College Men used to work laboriously and lengthily over letters to folks back home! ... But that has been eliminated by the Telephone.

There's one near you, and Home is only a few moments away! Just for fun ... call Home tonight.
